FARM PROFIT

Maturity Steals Your Forage Feeding Value

Do you know you can lose as much as $20 a ton by failing to cut your hay in the early bloom stage?

At early bloom a ton of hay will contain 18 to 20 per cent protein, according to a Massey-Ferguson research report. That's the same as 400 pounds of protein in a bag. So, with a $50 price tag on a ton of 40 per cent feed you'll have $40 a ton feeding value.

By the time hay matures protein has dropped to 12 per cent content. Then it isn't worth more than $20 a ton. At that rate of loss a month delay in mowing good, first cutting alfalfa running two tons an acre can cost you $40.

Many farmers find themselves cultivating corn when the hay starts to bloom, so they don't get around to cutting it until they have finished cultivating. This is costing money, because peak quality of hay and grass lasts only about a week.

The moral: Make hay while the clover blooms and you will be making hay financially, too.

VEPCO CONSTRUCTION

Actual construction of Virginia Electric and Power Company's $90,000,000 Gaston hydroelectric dam, eight miles upstream from the Roanoke Rapids, N. C., has been set for August 1, R. M. Hutcheson, vice president has announced.

The contract to build the dam has been awarded to the Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation, the same firm that built the Roanoke Rapids project.

Completion date has been set for the spring of 1963, Hutcheson said. Preliminary work, including the acquisition of reservoir property, has been proceeding for several months.

CLAIMS ANCESTOR NAMED APPOMATTOX

The local office of the National Park Service has had transmitted to it an interesting letter. It comes from the State of Oregon, and the writer states that he is interested in Appomattox, because he says, his ancestor was one "Appledag Maddox" and that's how the town got its name! (The maps of Captain John Smith in 1608, show an Indian tribe named "Appomattuck).

EVANS - ROBERTSON

The marriage of Miss Grace Eulelia Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David North Robertson, of Appomattox, and Mr. Bernard Burgess Evans, the son of Mrs. Vernie Evans, of Charlottesville, was an event of Saturday afternoon in the New Hope Baptist Church. The Rev. Marvin Jacobs officiated. Mrs. R. R. Leftwich provided the wedding music.

Given in marriage by John Clifton Harvey, her brother-in-law, the bride wore an intermission length gown of Chantilly lace and net. The basque bodice of lace was fashioned with a sabrina neckline embroidered in sequins. Her bouffant skirt, appliqued with lace, was topped with an overskirt of net. Her illusion veil was held by a cap of lace matching the dress. She carried a prayer-book, topped with an orchid and showered with stephanotis.

Mrs. Leo Quinn, Jr., of Appomattox, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a pale blue organza over taffeta gown with full skirt and long sleeves. Her head-band matched her dress, and she carried a bouquet of pale yellow carnations.

Other attendants were Mrs. Robert Detamore, of Reidsville, N. C., sister of the bridegroom; and Miss Joe Anne Jennell, of Charlottesville. They wore pale blue organza over taffeta dresses with full skirt, and long sleeves, matching headbands, and carried bouquets of pale pink carnations. Joan Marie Coleman, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Her dress was of pale blue organza and she carried a basket of bright petals.

Robert Delamore, of Reidsville, N. C., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Edward Burgess, of Harrisonburg, and Kyle Coleman, of Appomattox, the bride's parents gave a reception in the church social hall, immediately after the ceremony.

After a southeastern wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Evans will be at home at 426 Monroe Lane, Charlottesville.

The bride attended the Virginia Baptist Hospital School of Nursing, and the bridegroom attended the University of Virginia.

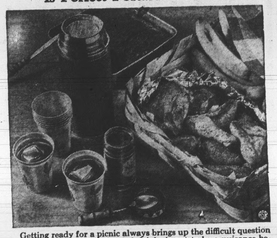
For Picnic Purposes, Instant Tea Is Perfect Portable Potable



Getting ready for a picnic always brings up the difficult question of drinks. To lug along bottled drinks is apt to be a nuisance because the bottles are heavy, occupy quite a lot of space, and require chilling. If you make tea or punch in advance, there's never enough, and if you put ice in your drink before you leave home, the drink gets diluted by the time you're ready to consume it.

As usual, there's a simple solution to this apparently knotty problem. Any picnic site worth visiting has a ready water supply. Take along a jar of Nestea,® the 100% pure instant tea, and make your cool drink on the spot. Nestea dissolves instantly in cold spring water to produce a refreshing beverage, clear as spring water itself and full of tea flavor.

Fill a thermos jug with ice cubes and add them to your tea when you make it. That eliminates the hazard of diluting your tea. One rounded teaspoon of instant tea in a glass of cold water pleases most tastes, but those who like their iced tea stronger need only add a little extra instant tea to the water and suit themselves.

Iced tea is a natural companion to the foods that most picnickers like best: cold fried chicken, the classic favorite; assorted raw vegetables, fresh fruits in which the season abounds, and a bite of something sweet.

To the usual word of caution, let one more be added: while you're not forgetting the salt for the tomatoes, don't forget the sugar for the iced tea. And while you're remembering the sugar, slip a lemon, a packet of mint, or whatever garnish you prefer to make the iced tea taste even better.
